

Scholarship Scams

It's no wonder that students and parents are so eager to find these sources of funding that they don't have to pay back, but this makes them easy targets for financial aid con artists. Scholarship scams have been around for years. Hundreds of thousands of people are cheated by scholarship scams each year, losing tens of millions of dollars. According to the Federal Trade Commission, if you hear these lines from a scholarship service, you may be getting duped:

"The scholarship is guaranteed or your money back."

No one can guarantee that they'll get you a grant or a scholarship. Refund guarantees often have conditions or strings attached. Get refund policies in writing and read the fine print.

"You can't get this information anywhere else."

You can tell from the preceding information that there are many free ways to look for available scholarships. Check out some of these sources before you decide to pay someone to do the work for you.

"I just need your credit card or bank account number to hold this scholarship."

Don't give your credit card or bank account number without getting information in writing first. It may be the setup for an unauthorized withdrawal from your account.

"We'll do all the work."

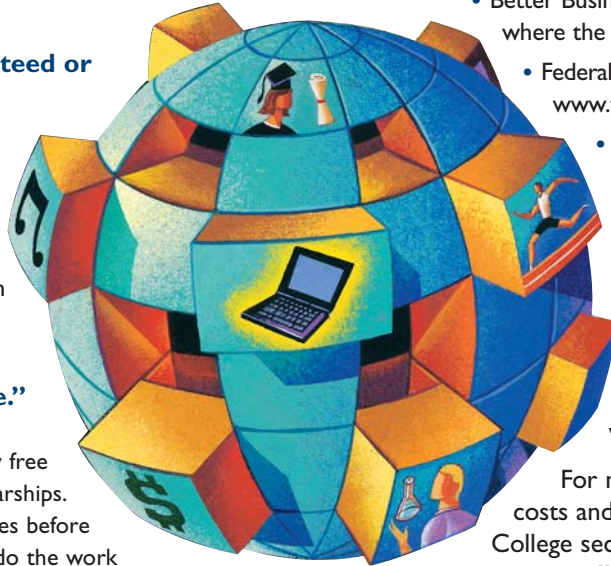

Don't be fooled. There's no way around it. You must apply for scholarships or grants yourself.

"The scholarship will cost money."

Don't pay anyone who claims to be "holding" a scholarship or grant for you.

"You've been selected" by a "national foundation" to receive a scholarship or "You're a finalist" in a contest you never entered.

Before you reply to a scholarship offer you didn't initiate, check it out. Make sure the foundation or program is legitimate.

What to Do if You Suspect an Offer Is a Scam

Start with your school counselor. Also, the following organizations can help you decide if an offer is legitimate. They will tell you whether they have received any complaints about the company, or whether the company is currently under investigation. Look for these organizations online or call for more information.

- Better Business Bureau (BBB) in the city where the scholarship service is located
- Federal Trade Commission 877 FTC-HELP
www.ftc.gov/scholarshipscams
- State Bureau of Consumer Protection
- State Attorney General's Office
- National Fraud Information Center (NFIC) 800 876-7060

For more information about scholarship scams, visit www.finaid.org.

For more information about college costs and financial aid, visit the Paying for College section on the College Board Web site at www.collegeboard.com.

The College Board's Mission

To prepare, inspire, and connect students to college and opportunity, with a commitment to excellence and equity.

Copyright © 2002 by College Entrance Examination Board. All rights reserved. College Board, CollegeCredit, CSS/Financial Aid PROFILE, and the acorn logo are registered trademarks of the College Entrance Examination Board. Other products and services mentioned herein may be trademarks of their respective owners. Visit College Board on the Web: www.collegeboard.com.

Any nonprofit organization or institution is encouraged to reproduce this publication in its entirety in quantity sufficient for its own use, but not for sale, provided that the copyright notice be retained exactly as it appears here. This brochure is available for download from the College Board Web site.

This brochure is based on "Searching for a Scholarship? Buyer Beware!," written and produced by the Guidance and Admission Committee of the Western Regional Council.

www.collegeboard.com/educationloans
800 831-5626

Scholarships

Everything You Need to Know About Finding Free Money for College and Avoiding Scams

www.collegeboard.com

Scholarships are an attractive way to help manage college costs. You don't have to repay them like loans, or work to earn them like work-study. Because there are so many scholarships available, sometimes it's hard to know where to begin! Use this guide to help you get started on your free search for scholarship money. Remember, there are many ways to search for scholarships that cost you nothing, so don't get caught in a scam!

Local Public Libraries

Check out the college section at your public library. You should find a selection of scholarship books, like the College Board Scholarship Handbook. You will also be able to research other college information, such as college costs and other sources of aid.

Public and Private Organizations

Look into religious, community service, fraternal, military, union, or professional organizations, especially those with which you or your parents are associated. Many of these organizations may offer money for higher education. Don't forget to ask your parents to check with their employers.

State Agencies

Check to see if your state offers scholarship and grant programs for its residents. This is a great place to look if you plan to attend college in your own state because some of the awards are only available to applicants who will attend school in their home state. Look on your state's Web site or contact your college for more information.

Institution You Will Attend

Check out your college Web site, catalog, and financial aid office to find out what kinds of scholarships are offered by your college. These scholarships

Many scholarships require you to provide them with some combination of the following:

- Transcript
- Standardized test scores
- Financial aid forms, such as the FAFSA or CSS/Financial Aid PROFILE®
- Parent's financial information, including tax returns
- One or more essays
- One or more letters of recommendation
- Proof of eligibility (e.g., membership credentials)

You may also need to prepare for a personal interview. For students competing for talent-based scholarships, an audition, performance, or portfolio may be required.

4. Proofread your application carefully.

Use your computer's spelling and grammar check features. Have a parent, teacher, or friend read your essays.

5. Don't leave items blank.

Contact scholarship sponsors if you aren't sure how to fill out any part of the application.

may be awarded automatically or you may have to apply separately. They can be based on a variety of factors such as financial need, intended major, ethnicity, or merit. You should find out the application process, whether the award is renewable, and, if renewable, what the requirements are to maintain the award.

The Internet

Use one of the many free online scholarship searches. Based on the information you provide about yourself, they will generate a list of scholarships you may be eligible to receive.

Try out these free scholarship searches:

www.collegeboard.com, Paying for College section—The College Board

www.fastweb.com—FastWEB

www.srnexpress.com—Scholarship Research Network Express

www.wiredscholar.com—Wired Scholar

As you search different sites about paying for college, be careful of the "free money" ads you may see. These may be scholarship scams! Read on for more information about how you can tell.

Scholarship Success

Now that you've found some scholarships you want to apply for, use the following tips on how to successfully attain them.

1. Start your research early.

The more time you can put into your scholarship search, the more options you'll have. You'll need time to research scholarships, request information and application materials, and complete your application. Plus, some scholarships have deadlines early in the fall of senior year.

2. Read eligibility requirements carefully.

If you have a question about your eligibility for a particular scholarship, contact the scholarship sponsors.

3. Organize all of your scholarship materials.

Create a separate file for each scholarship and file by application date. Keep a calendar of application deadlines and follow-up appointments.

6. Follow instructions to the letter.

Avoid going over the length limit for the essay, and resist the temptation to send supporting materials that are not requested in the application.

7. Make sure your application is legible.

Type or print your application forms and essays.

8. Make copies of everything you send.

If application materials are lost, having copies on hand will make it much easier to resend your application quickly.

9. Double-check your application.

If you're reusing material (such as a cover letter or essay) from another scholarship application, be especially careful you haven't left in any incorrect names or blank fields. Don't forget to sign and date your application.

10. Get your applications in early.

You'll miss out if you miss deadlines. Consider using certified mail or return receipt.